MARBELLA
MALAGA
SPAIN
DRØBAK
OSLO
NORWAY

AGIDEL

MAGAZINE

FASHION
BEAUTY
TRAVEL
NATURE
CULTURE
LIFESTYLE

CONTENTS

Pick of the Week Winners	5
Elena Patrina: The journey of a lifetime	9
Matteo Fochesato: The cage we have inside	12
Rmin Naseri: Suffocation	15
Peshkov Konstantin: Sand	18
Jehriko Turner : My Light	21
Marina Agliullina: Grain of Sand	24
Gabriele Mansolillo: Frammenti	28
Elena Sychikova: Женский портрет в историческом месте Замок Ольденбургских	32
Жанна Соснина: White flower	35
Linda E. Burkhart (Maliha B. Rose): Model Logic	38
Andrea Sartore: Equestrian vibes	41
Andrey Lukovnikov: Edge of Reality	44
Masumi Taguchi: Conjoining	47
Tatiana Sayko: Black and white creations	50
Viktoria Kosinskaya: Оля	53
Amaan Imam: Leap	57
Sky Stitched Designs: Queen of Hearts	59
Neo sadhu by JDYS	62
Agidel Face in March: Wearable Art by Adelash Nyk Sykes.	65

Agidel Magazine Issue 13. March 2024
Marbella, Spain
Drøbak, Norway
www.kavyar.com/agidel-magazine
E-mail: agidelmag@gmail.com
Instagram: @agidelmag
Pinterest: pinterest.fr/agidelmag/
Distribution via Magcloud - Agidel
Editor-in-chef: Lilia Abrahamsen
Editors: Lars Abrahamsen/ Agidel Abrahamsen

AGID&L

Marina Agliullina

GRAIN OF SAND

Like a lot of other human beings, I have to live in cities. Probably, half of my life was spent in really big cities. They are simply unavoidable if you want to build a career in art and photography. You have to go there to meet the biggest names and brands in the industry.

Sometimes I'm too busy to feel it, but big cities can be very overwhelming and clumsy. They are so big that a person living there feels like a grain of sand in comparison. They are so big that they often are not capable to cope well with their own growth which leads to strange artefacts, like holes in central streets or hilarious fences around construction sites.

I started to think about it a lot after the covid-19 pandemic restriction got lifted. I finally got back the ability to walk wherever I wanted and travel. Once I was walking around the neighborhood where I lived at the moment with a friend of mine, a stylist. We were running around, having fun and enjoying the freedom and the sun. And then I looked around and thought how small we were in comparison to what was surrounding us.

After some time passed, I asked that friend of mine to help me to take a few pictures in the same neighborhood. I wanted to show how small we, humans, are in comparison to the environment we build. I asked my friend to combine the roles of the model and a stylist because we were both going to leave the city soon and go different directions, so I really wanted to spend those days together. We decided that it was important for clothes to be simple but eye-catching against the colors of the city.

AGIDEL

AGIDEL